

I RAISE A GLASS

They say the man who drinks alone is just as good as lost,
And I've been doing some of that, it's true.
But being by myself don't mean I can't propose a toast.
When I raise a glass, I raise a glass to you.

I drink always to your health, to your beauty and your charm,
And I swear that I will kill the man who does you any harm.
I shout, "Here's to the finest gal in town and all the county too!"
When I raise a glass, I raise a glass to you.

Of course, I might not drink so much if you were by my side
And I didn't have to think that we were through.
But as long as I have life in me, you're all my joy and pride.
When I raise a glass, I raise a glass to you.

I drink always to your health, to your beauty and your charm,
And I swear that I will kill the man who does you any harm.
I shout, "Here's to the finest gal in town and all the county too!"
When I raise a glass, I raise a glass to you.
