

SAFE IN YOUR LOVE

Safe in your love, its quiet roads and pastures:
A place at your side, to walk with you.
To read in your eyes, to pick up on your gestures,
To lock up my fear and walk out safe in your love.

Deep in the smoke, the smell of racing engines,
Under a shroud of endless light,
Among roaches and mice and, bless their hearts, the pigeons,
I look everywhere to find me safe in your love.

Stripped to my skin, beyond my last defenses,
No further than here, I wait for you,
Blessing the day I shrugged and took my chances,
Leapt over the wall and touched down safe in your love,
Leapt over the wall and touched down safe in your love.
